If Manchester had used his special accommodations in the National Archives for more than a pad, he'd have located the kind of schmalzy trivia he escalates into the pretense of significance in the Comission's File No. 1066. On pages 56-9 he'd have learned that the teen-aged son Martin, of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Gewertz, had actually taken movies of the President's body leaving Parkland Hospital (with an 8 mm Bell & Howell camera that at 12:20 p.m., ten minutes before the assassination, while he was standing outside 2025 Cedar Springs Road, had not worked properly, to add a proper Manchesterian touch).
